

IN THE CIVIL SERVICE.

BY ROBERT L. BADELLE.

It was a "Silver Service" clerk.
A happy man was he.
Under the blue from his horn-like
He must have been a morn-like.

With joy he hastened to his home,
He hugged his wife and child.
He kissed his wife and child.
He kissed his wife and child.

"They asked me 'Where was Homer born?'
I told them they were wrong.
The man who led the horse for them
The battle of Antietam.

"I gave a list of the English kings
From William down to James;
And told the number of Maria's rings;
And Mrs. Southworth's names.

"About 'Penny' I told;
I named the 'North' and 'South';
And then I showed them how to fold
A paper-fifty ways.

"Book 111, 'Read, I wanted to know;
And read some of Xenophon;
And told the cause of the cholera;
And the cause of the cholera.

"And I passed with honor and high award,
And I'll stick to my work;
I'm so glad the office is so hard
For a dollar and a half a day.

Lord laughed the clerk, I lord laughed the
And the children, lord laughed the
And the children, lord laughed the
And the children, lord laughed the.

"Penny, lord, it's English, quite
English, you know,
This should be 'harris', but harris
isn't right.

"Neither would cholera, in fact, there's another reason for reason in cholera.
